Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 0400 on Monday 13 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Most dry, bright. Blustery showers northwest. Perhaps storms Northern Isles.

Today:
Most staying dry and seeing good bright and sunny spells, these more prolonged across Northeast. Over Highlands and Islands, a showery day with some heavier outbreaks, chiefly through morning. Westerly winds strong in north, perhaps storm force over Shetland initially.

Tonight:
Central, south and east dry with some clear spells for evening. Scattered showers over northwest merging to longer periods of rain late in the night as southwest winds strengthen.

Tuesday:
Dry start in south and east. Otherwise a cloudy day with occasional rain, persistent and occasionally heavy across Highlands and Islands. Strong west to southwest winds touching gale in north.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Wednesday rather cloudy with patchy rain in central and south, while most in north stay dry and occasionally bright. Thursday and Friday mainly fine, dry and occasionally sunny.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.